

Human Resource Recruitment and Best Talent Retention Tool Kit for Public Sector

UNDESA/DPADM
New York, 2005

Foreword

Service delivery of the Public Sector is becoming more and more crucial for the socio-economic development of countries. It concurs in fact for the legitimacy of each Government which embarks in the challenge to meeting the needs of the people.

In this respect, Human Resources as the lively blood of organizations and the key factor for the revitalization of the Public Administration, should be properly addressed for a better service delivery leading to appropriate and cost-effective services following the population and the various development partners expectations .

Nowadays, whereas the focus is primarily on the Millennium Development Goals, the excellence of public services to be delivered by any institution, depends on how talented and competent its human resources are.

This is why recruitment selection and retention of sharp employees within public sector organizations stand as top priority for managers and employers in Public Sector.

Foreword

There is no greater challenge in public sector today than recruiting, hiring and retaining talented people at work; and this trend will be reinforcing in the future.

Supporting public sector employers and managers to meet this challenge, the United Nations Committee of Experts on Public Administration (CEPA) at its first session that was held from July 22–26, 2002, has identified as one of the priority activities to be performed by the Division for Public Administration and Development Management of the United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs (UNDESA/DPADM).

Further to this CEPA resolution, UNDESA/DPADM called upon the expertise of the International Public Management Association for Human Resources (IPMA-HR) to carry out a number of studies in view to point out appropriate recruitment selection and retention Strategies aiming at getting the best talent in the public sector.

Foreword

The findings of these studies have been compiled in this CD-ROM which comprises in addition the report on the specific workshop organized at Florence by UNDESA/DPADM on the theme: “Unlocking the Human Potential for Public Sector Performance”.

Additional documentation has also been included to provide more reference instruments to the reader for the following purpose:

i) how to get the best pool of qualified applicants, and ii) how to prepare and make the public sector institutions be alert in identifying job vacancies and filling them in a proactive, effective and responsive manner respective to their business plans.

In order to make this CD-ROM and its entire documentation user friendly, this introductory presentation has been developed by UNDESA/DPADM as a guiding tool for Human Resource management focusing on recruitment, selection and retention of best talent.

We wish this will enable public sector organizations and managers to compete successfully for more qualified and competent people today and in the future.

Foreword

We would like to thank Odette Ramsingh of the South Africa Public Service Commission, Sandra Marchack and Margaret Richardson of the Trinidad and Tobago Personnel Department, and Sima Simananta and Aim-On Aramkul of the Thailand Office of the Civil Service Commission for their contributions.

We also would like to express our appreciation to Judith Brown, IPMA-HR Director of Research and Neil Reichenberg, IPMA-HR Executive Director, for their valuable contribution including all the substantive papers on this achievement.

By the same token we would pay a special tribute to all UNDESA/DPADM colleagues who contributed for this useful accomplishment .

MODULE 1

Human Resource Profile for Effective Public Administration in a Globalized World

HR Management : Current Dilemmas for Public Sector

- A common set of human resource management (HRM) dilemmas for Public sector mostly in the developed world, can be pinpointed as follows:
 - The aging of the indigenous civil service, posing the immediate threat of high turnover and a lack of qualified replacements;
 - A growing vacuum among “the leadership bench” – the next generation of policymakers and top civil servants who will assume critical roles in directing their governments' efforts to negotiate the troubled waters of the 21st Century;
 - The changing definition of career, which means that employee loyalty to the organization is tenuous at best, and which discourages workers from joining government service for the long haul;

HR Management : Current Dilemmas for Public Sector

- Rapid change (e.g., in technology and economic conditions) that requires a highly fluid skill mix in the workforce
- Strong competition from the private sector for the best and the brightest
- Budget limitations that reduce compensation and financial incentives, thereby placing government at a disadvantage vis-à-vis business and industry
- A negative public image, which translates into the widespread perception that government (public sector) is no longer the employer of choice

HR Management: Perspectives for Public Sector

- A holistic national strategy to strengthen the management of human capital in the public sector needs to be adopted in each country
- The changing role of the State as well as new international forces have resulted in the need for new skills, attitudes and behaviors among public officials at all levels
- The core competencies for the public sector of the 21st century differ in many ways from the past, especially as the demands placed on public servants, in terms of skills, knowledge and capacities, are rapidly increasing and becoming more complex
- Connecting the mission of the public sector with empowered public officials and a system that supports innovation and excellence can make a big difference

HR Management Perspectives for Public Sector

Guiding Principles

➤ Neutral principle:

Protect the Public Service from political interference in the recruitment and promotion processes, in order to build professional and highly competent institutions

➤ Merit principle:

While we need to defend and protect the “principle of a meritorious Public Service”, we must also be prepared to review and change the “merit system”

➤ Principle of Adequacy:

People with the adequate policy competencies are available at the time and place where they are needed.

Adequate human resources are required in the public sector in order to plan, implement, monitor and evaluate policies and strategies for achieving the Millennium Development Goals, including poverty eradication both in developed and developing countries.
